You were a child of the universe. The years we spent together were enlightening and beautiful. You always did what you thought was best for yourself. Sometimes it wasn't best for everyone but, that was your nature. You had a unique and honest way of expressing yourself.. You're blue eyes would sometimes light up with fire as you made your point with passionate determination. You loved those you cared about with all of your heart and left like the wind when distant voices called. You were loved and often misunderstood. You had a huge heart that made others miss you when you weren't around. A child of the universe, true to herself has left us but, now for good. I will think about you often as I always do and I will always miss you.
