“ I will always remember Mr. Andrews for embodying humanity's truly admirable traits. His patience and understanding made him a great person and teacher. Math can be incredibly intimidating. Mr. Andrews made it relatable, simple, and even friendly. Knowledge is the greatest gift, and it takes a gifted person to impart it.

“ Professor John F. Andrews was one of the kindest, most relational, and truly entertaining teachers I ever had the pleasure of being taught by. For someone who did not love math so much, I looked forward to every class period with him. I was lucky enough to have him two years in a row. I knew I could always relax and trust him. The times where he would slip into a reading of scripture or a devotional passage at the beginning of class became a necessary reminder for me to center myself in the Word. Even at a Catholic school, I feel like it isn't easy to casually slip scripture into a high school algebra class, but his genuine nature and down-to-earth presence made it easier to forget about the world for a second. Mrs. Andrews, praying for your family and friends in this time of mourning. The way you two represented friendship on campus made an impact on more people than you know. Sending love your way. Thank you for endlessly devoting so much of your time and energy into us. Rest in peace Mr. Andrews.
